

Happy world book week!

To celebrate, us Literacy Ambassadors have made a Google doc full of fantastic activities that you can do for fun from word searches to crosswords to drawing.

There is also a quiz on Thursday at lunchtime all about - you've guessed it - world book day! If you join the library Google classroom (the code is 5ievezn) then you'll see the link and be able to join.

Happy reading!

Are you artsy?

If you answered yes, then we've got a challenge for you! Below is a character and two setting descriptions. Read over them and then try to draw what you think the descriptions would look like in real life. If drawing isn't your thing, maybe try creating the picture in your head! See what you can make and discover how important good descriptions are.

Character description:

From The Poisonwood Bible by Barbara Kingsolver,
Rachel wore her green linen Easter suit she was so vain of, and her long whitish hair pulled off her forehead with a wide pink elastic hair band ... Sitting next to me on the plane, she kept batting her whiterabbit eyelashes and adjusting her bright pink hairband, trying to get me to notice she had secretly painted her fingernails bubble-gum pink to match.

Setting description:

From Filmed in Faithlessness,
Dust coated every last surface. He ran his finger across the rows of books, the span of tables, and the wide window frames. It came up black. A fast-winged crow clipped past his ear and he wondered which broken window the ugly creature entered through. As it perched atop a broken spray of glass and squaked at him, he realized he'd never find her again. He was every bit as broken as the tired home, filmed in faithlessness.

Setting description:

From Pink Lemonade and Cookies,
The lime green patio umbrella flapped happily in the breeze. It covered strawberry slushies, watermelon pies, and bright, cheerful stacks of donuts. Emily stepped outside to feature a crystal pitcher of pink lemonade and a spray of warm cookies in the center of the table. She had on her favorite summer dress and knew that, as soon as he stepped through that patio gate, her life would never be the same again.
